ABSTRACT

This report presents tables that show the distribution of minority group students in schools of different racial/ethnic composition. Distribution tables are presented for the nation as a whole, for five regions, and for each of the States, including the District of Columbia. Within each of these geographical subdivisions, there is a table that indicates the distribution of all minority pupils and one or more other tables that show the pupil distribution by the following specific minority categories: 1) American Indian or Alaskan Native; 2) Asian or Pacific Islander; 3) Hispanic; and 4) black. In each table, schools are categorized by the percentage of minority pupils enrolled. The table shows the number of pupils in each of the percentage groups, the percent that this number is of all minority pupils, and the number and percent of schools in each percentage group. Data are provided for each even-numbered year within the period 1968 to 1978. The report is based on information collected in the Fall Elementary and Secondary Civil Rights Surveys for the years for which data are shown. (Author/MJL)

INTRODUCTION

This report presents tables displaying the distribution of minority pupils in schools of different racial/ethnic composition. This introduction is intended to guide the reader in using the tables.

Structure of the Tables

All tables in this document follow the same format. When all schools are categorized by their percentage minority enrollment -- such as those that enroll less than 10 percent minority pupils, those that enroll from 10 to 20 percent minority pupils, and so on -- the tables report the number of minority pupils in each of those categories and the percent that this number is of all minority pupils. Similarly, the tables report the number and percent of schools in each category. Each report displays these data items for each even-numbered year 1968 through 1978.

Reports are presented for different geographic entities and for different definitions of minority pupils.

Geographic Entities

Distribution tables are presented for the nation as a whole, for five regions, and for each State (the District of Columbia is included as a State). The regions are defined as follows:

NORTHEAST	BORDER	SOUTH	MID WEST	WEST
Connecticut	Delaware	Alabama	Illinois	Arizona
Maine	District of Columbia	Arkansas	Indiana	California
Massachusetts	Kentucky	Georgia	Iowa	Colorado
New Hampshire	Maryland	Florida	Kansas	Idaho
New Jersey	Missouri	Louisiana	Michigan	Montana
New York	Oklahoma	Mississippi	Minnesota	Nevada
Pennsylvania	West Virginia	North Carolina	Nebraska	New Mexico
Rhode Island		South Carolina	North Dakota	Oregon
Vermont		Tennessee	Ohio	Utah
		Texas	South Dakota	Washington
		Virginia	Wisconsin	Wyoming

Minority Categories

There are four minority categories: (1) American Indian or Alaskan Native, (2) Asian or Pacific Islander, (3) Hispanic, and (4) Black, Not of Hispanic Origin.* In addition to the basic table, showing the distribution of all minority pupils, tables are presented whenever a specific minority category is of particular interest in a given geographic entity. Generally, this occurs when a specific minority category constitutes five percent or more of a geographic entity. For instance, six percent of the Northeast's enrollment is Hispanic, so that a table showing the distribution of Hispanic pupils in the Northeast's schools is also displayed. Also, some minorities are concentrated in particular areas. For instance, 44 percent of the nation's American Indian or Alaskan Native pupils are in the West; a table is produced showing the distribution of these pupils in the schools in the West, even though they are less than two percent of total enrollment in that region. At the national level, one table is presented for each minority category independent of these criteria.

*This categorization, in use since 1976, differs somewhat, both in terminology and definition, from earlier usage.

How to Read the Tables

With this discussion in mind, we can examine a typical table. The truncated fragment of a national-level table is displayed below.

The key elements of the table are:

1. Definition of the minority. In this instance, it is the sum of all minority pupils.

2. Geographic entity. In this instance, the nation.

3. Schools by percent minority composition. This categorization is at intervals of 10 percent through 89.9 percent, and then is further divided into those that enroll between 90 and 89.9 percent minority pupils, and those that enroll between 99 and 100 percent minority pupils.

4. Year. Each table shows data for each even-numbered year, 1968 through 1978.

5. Schools. The first two rows for a given year show how many schools are in each category of minority concentration and what percent this number is of all schools in that year. In this fragment, it can be seen that there were 54,610 schools in 1968 in which minorities made up less than 10 percent of total enrollment, and from the second row we find that this is 68.39 percent of all schools in that year.

6. (Minority) Enrollment. The next two rows show that the 54,610 schools that were less than 10 percent minority in composition enrolled 632,184 minority pupils, or 7.3 percent of all minority pupils in 1968.

Interpretation of the Table Content

The tables presented here offer one view of the isolation of minority pupils in the nation's schools. It is an important perspective, but not the only one. Minority children who are in schools that enroll almost entirely minority children are indeed isolated. But in some instances this occurs because of demography rather than because school district officials follow discriminatory practices in assigning pupils to different schools within their districts. For example, many children in the District of Columbia attend schools that are nearly all minority in composition; but this situation could be altered only if such children were transferred to schools outside the District, as 96 percent of this district's total enrollment is minority. As this example shows, even if there were complete within-system desegregation (that is, if the racial/ethnic composition of each school exactly reflected the composition of its system) in every system in the nation, many children, particularly in the largest school systems, would still be isolated because their systems are composed almost entirely of minority pupils.

Data Sources

This report is based on data collected in the Fall Elementary and Secondary School Civil Rights Surveys for the years for which data is shown. Although the number of districts surveyed varied in these years -- as many as 8,505 districts in 1968 and as few as 2,992 in 1974 -- the samples are projectible to State, regional, and national levels.

Comparison with Earlier Reports

The Office for Civil Rights has supported the presentation of similar tabulations in prior years, and some readers may wish to refer to earlier documents for comparison. Such readers should be aware that the method used in preparing the 1976 report (which displayed distributions from 1970 through 1976) is sufficiently different from the method used in the present report that the results cannot be compared. In the preparation of the earlier report, the data base was limited to the set of districts that had been surveyed in each year for which tabulations were to be made. This came to 1,910 districts. Approximately 70 percent of these were in the South (because OCR surveys traditionally included all districts in most of the States of the South). Such a data base does not support projection of results for the nation or for regions and States other than the South. The present report uses the full data bases for each year reported, so that such projections are possible.

Organization of the Report

The tables in this report are presented in the order of the nation, the five regions, and each of the States (the States in alphabetic order). Within each of these entries, one table is presented showing the distribution of all minority pupils and then one or more tables showing the distribution of specific minority categories. The reader may refer to the contents page to locate tables by geographic entity.
